These girls can! I met England's young female rugby stars

By Fleur

I was privileged to meet the two captains of the England Women's Under-20 rugby squad.

Phoebe and Carys said they have been playing rugby since the age of six!

The squad had been training hard for their match against France later that day.

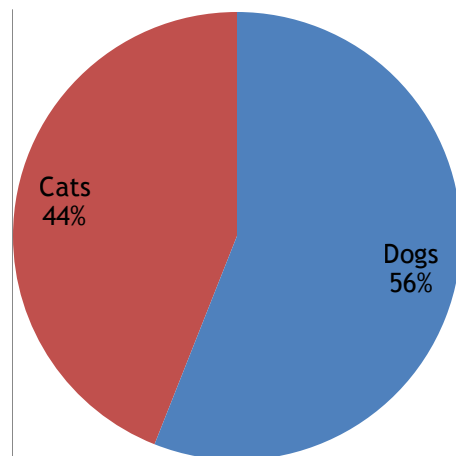

"We're all feeling very positive about the game and I think we have a strong chance of winning," said Phoebe.

These women are role models to aspiring young girls nationwide. This proves that girls can do anything.

No matter what gender you are, or what the colour of your skin might be, you can do anything you want to – whether being the next captain of the England Women's rugby team or the new cover model for Teen Vogue.

If you put your mind to it, you can do anything. It's time to stand up and show the world Girl Power!

Devoted to dogs – or crazy about cats?

We asked 25 people from JRJ what their preference was – dogs or cats? As you can see, there was a clear majority for dogs.

Goodbye, and good luck for next year!

By Rowan

We have all had a great time in JRJ Newspaper Club. John Rankin News will carry on with a new team of reporters later in the year. From September it will become an after-school club from 3.15 to 4.15 on Thursdays for Years 5 and 6.
